COVID-19 infections in the past two months

A : asymptomatic
People who test positive for COVID-19 but show no symptoms. They may be in the early incubation period of the infection and could show symptoms later. Over 90 percent of infections during the recent resurgence in Shanghai were asymptomatic.

F : fangcang
It means makeshift hospitals, mainly renovated from large public facilities such as stadiums or conference centers. Shanghai's largest makeshift hospital at the National Exhibition and Convention Center remains operational with 50,000 beds. At the peak of this COVID-19 resurgence, more than 250,000 Shanghai residents were quarantined in a fangcang hospital.

B : BA.2
Omicron BA.2 and BA.2.2 are the dominant COVID-19 sub-variants of Shanghai's resurgence since March. They are highly contagious, difficult to conceal, and spread rapidly.

G : group-buying
Community group-buying has become a lifeline for many locked-down residents with logistics nearly paralyzed. A leader gathers the purchase demands of neighbors and asks the suppliers to transport the goods to the community in bulk.

C : close contacts
People who have had unprotected close contact with confirmed, asymptomatic, or suspected cases within four days of the cases exhibiting symptoms or having a positive PCR test, as well as those who have been exposed to a potentially contaminated environment.

H : health code
Residents must show or scan the green health code when entering or leaving their communities, as well as most public venues. The latest PCR test report is also displayed on the health code page for the convenience of inspection.

D : dabai
Medical workers, quarantine staff, or volunteers wearing white hazmat suits. The term originates from the Chinese nickname of Baymax, a healthcare robot in the animated movie "Big Hero 6."

I : incubation
The Omicron variant has a shorter incubation period of four days on average compared with other coronavirus variants.

E : essential services
Delivery, medical and some taxi services continued to operate during the lockdown to ensure the supply of basic daily necessities and services.
