

SHANGHAI FILM PARK

One of the 10 greatest film-making bases in China, the Shanghai Film Park has provided numerous movie and TV scenes with its full-scale replica of old Shanghai, including Nanjing Road and European-style houses of celebrities.

As visitors wander freely in the park, they can often catch a film or TV shoot in progress and learn how movies and TV shows are made. The park also offers immersive and interactive dramas, sets for weddings, and photo-taking services in period clothing.

Many films and TV dramas have been shot there using the park's time-honored streetscapes. Among them are "Temptress Moon," "The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor," "Lust, Caution" and "Kung Fu Hustle."

FAIRMONT PEACE HOTEL

Built in 1926, the hotel is a luxurious Art Deco masterpiece, where old-fashioned glamor sparkles with a new luster. Located at the intersection of the Bund and the bustling Nanjing Road, the hotel is an ideal place to experience the distinctive charm and vitality of the city.

The old building has also witnessed the flourishing of movies in China. In 1937, "Angels on the Road," a film starring Zhao Dan and Zhou Xuan, was shot at the site. To date, more than 50 movies and TV series have used the building as a set. Among them are "101st Marriage Proposal," "Eternal Wave" and "Blossoms."

ZHUJIAJIAO WATERTOWN

The Zhujiajiao Watertown, which was established about 1,700 years ago, is well preserved on the outskirts of the city. The ancient town features a network of waterways, curved stone bridges and traditional Chinese-style residences on the banks. It also enjoys a reputation as the "Venice of Shanghai."

Visitors can stroll along the watertown's old streets, sample local delicacies and relax in coffee shops and bars. They can also visit the exquisite Kezhi Garden or take a boat trip to experience a slow-paced lifestyle at the tranquil resort.

The watertown has provided film sets for many productions, including "Perfect Partner," "The Perfect Wedding" and "Familiar Taste."
